

THE GOAL OF THE RIO NUEVO PROJECT IS TO RECAPTURE AND CELEBRATE TUCSON'S HISTORY

One way to capture historical evidence is through the science of archaeology. . . The excavations have uncovered evidence of 4,000 years of human occupation along the banks of the Santa Cruz River at the foot of "A" Mountain. American Indians, Spaniards, Mexicans, Chinese, European Americans, have all left their marks in the earth. Once the excavations are completed, the information will be used to interpret Tucson's past for visitors.

The old river will begin a new life.
